THE BROOKLYN TRIAL.

HOW THE INTERESTED PARTIES LOOK AT THIS STAGE OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

Mrs Beecher Rapidly Playing Out

(Brooklyn Letter to the Chicago Tribune, Ill.) A general impression prevailed that, at the end of the cross-examination, Evarts would overwhelm the witness with some question which would leave him prostrate. The demolition so long suspended was postponed was thought to be in abeyance until the trial was over. In reference to the sanguine expectancy of the crowd it was disappointment when today turned out to be the very dull and most pointless of all the lagging series. You can imagine the atmospheric effect of five hundred lamp and steaming persons all wearing rubber overshoes, barbers pomade, and wet overcoats, pent in a room 50 feet square. The very judge on the bench was choking, and great waves of stifled vapor rolled out into the corridors whenever the doors were opened. It was like taking a public Turner bath company with 10,000 people in perspiration. If the committee, later really intends to slide out of the tiresome business on the score that the air is fatal to his lungs, he had better avail himself of the very next occasion which resembles the stifling unwholesomeness of to-day. Otherwise he will stay at home in dead earnest.

Soon dimly, as a red sun through a November fog, was the visage of Beecher this morning. If he is in training for the witness stand he must, for once at least, have abandoned his preceptor's system. Instead of the healthy pinkness to which his color had been reduced, he looked fat just as apoplectic and blowzy as ever. A heavy bracelet of gold chain about the third finger was apparent to every one. Coincident with the return of his purple was the return of his merriment. Fixing his eyes on the ceiling of the court-room, whenever there was the slightest excuse for laughter, Beecher laughed. His mirth was not infectious, for everybody else looked unspeakably dull all day.

Mrs. Beecher cannot stand much more of the excitement, suspense, and tedium of the trial. Her days are few unless she speedily takes flight to the balmy Southern air, away from which she spends her first winter. Her features are still plumper, and the suppressed fire which gleamed in her eye seems to have burnt itself out. For her the spectator cannot but feel pity, if not genuine sympathy.

Mrs. Tilton and Mrs. Field were the only other familiar woman faces present, there being but two other Amazons to represent their sex. Tilton was in no better health, though in obviously better humor, thanks to some discipline enforced, I believe, by Beach. He has abandoned the old habit of prodding Evarts with grammatical corrections. The wound he thus inflicted was small and unnecessary, though it evidently caused the same old harlotress to smart. From the moment of his counsel's instructions, Tilton has consented to report in such a fashion to the questions of his examiner, and as a consequence, the proceedings to-day moved along without much judicial lubrication. Evarts was animated by a manifest desire to close the case before twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of his time shall have been exhausted and shall have left his client in debt. The gloominess of the day without filled the court with its melancholy presence. Everybody, save everybody else through a fog daily. Tilton looked like a prominent dimly visible in London smoke. Evarts was a black streak on leaden background. The Judge remained one of some Indian idol, large and portentous, wrapped with clouds of frankincense. We knew that he was ugly, but we felt that he was great, and, though the odors which he gave off were not of Arabian shop-keepers, but rather born of Chatham street-shops, all eyes regarded him as the high priest, if not the deity, of the temple. In the orchestra overhead dickered a faint circle of gas-jets set round like a catherine-wheel, and mocking the wretchedness with which sickly glow. It was like a village meeting at midnight on the edge of anague-bred swamp.

SINGULAR MATHEMATICAL FACT. Any number of figures you may wish to multiply by five will give the same result if divided by two—a much quicker operation but you must remember to annex a cipher to the answer, whenever there is no remainder, and when there is, no remainder, whenever there may be, annex a five to the answer. Multiply 461 by 5 and the answer will be 2,305; dividing the same number by 2 and you have 22, and as there is no remainder you add a cipher. Now take 357, and multiply by 5; there is 1,785. Divide the same number by 2 and you have 178 and a remainder; you therefore place a 5 at the end of the line and the result is again 1,785.

DON'T HACK, HACK, COUGH, COUGH! Coughs as symptom by which various diseases of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs manifest themselves. But whether it arises from irritation or infection of the throat, and the cause of the disease, nothing will allay it more speedily or cure it more permanently than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medicated Discovery. It does not matter whether it is a recent attack, or a long drawn-out, chronic disease, or whether it arises from any other cause, nothing will allay it more speedily or cure it more permanently than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medicated Discovery.
